Knowles-Nelson Stewardship lands & public access restrictions and/or prohibitions for the period 1990 to - October 27, 2007

This report was prepared as required by Wisconsin Statute S. 23.0916(3)(ec) which reads:

> "…the department shall make available to the public a written list of all stewardship land that was acquired before October 2007, and for which public access has been restricted or prohibited and the reasons for that action"

The report covers the period 1990 (the beginning of the Stewardship Program) through October 27, 2007 as per the statute. The report is divided into three sections: the first section reports on the lands acquired directly by the Department, the second and third sections report on Stewardship lands acquired by nonprofit and local government partners through Stewardship-funded grants.

Section 1 – Stewardship lands purchased by the DNR

The lands acquired by the Department are listed by property type and the total acres acquired in fee or easement for the 1990 – October 27, 2007 time period. The report lists explanations of public access restrictions or prohibitions on acres managed by each DNR program.

Brief descriptions below of the several property types owned and managed by the DNR may help readers understand the attached figures.

Fisheries Management
The easement program focuses on acquiring fishing access along cold water streams. Typical fisheries access easements cover a narrow strip of property along the stream (generally 66 feet) along which access is for fishing and hiking purposes only. Trapping rights are not acquired and the corridor is deemed too narrow for hunting purposes.

The easements closed to all public use are small access easements for DNR management purposes and a small number of very sensitive sites such a spring heads or spawning areas that DNR managers felt should be protected.

Natural Areas
The closed natural areas sites are smaller sites which are very sensitive and harbor species especially vulnerable to disturbance.

Northern Forests
The closed easements are closed to trapping only. When these easements were acquired, early in the development of the Forest Legacy easement program, they were patterned after the Managed Forest Law in the state which allows for public access expect for trapping purposes.

Parks and Trails
Prior to the Sporting Heritage Act of 2011, all state park land acquired between 1990 and October 27, 2007 was closed to trapping by statute and open to hunting only as approved in administrative code. The Sporting Heritage Act reversed this: all state parks lands are now open to hunting and trapping unless restricted as per S. 29.089.

Some of the closed easements managed by the State Parks program were purchased with funding directed by statute for Baraboo Hills conservation. The closed easements in the Baraboo Hills were acquired as part of an effort to protect the contiguous forest canopy of the area and to limit further development. The Baraboo hills contain the southernmost and largest contiguous block of northern hardwood forest in the upper Midwest and a highly significant nesting area for interior forest birds in the Midwest.

Wildlife Management

Many DNR-purchased easements without public access rights lie within the Glacial Habitat Restoration Area (GHRA) in Fond du Lac, Winnebago, Columbia and Dodge Counties. At the time the GHRA was established (1990), there was Stewardship funding earmarked for this project area with which the Department was only permitted to acquire easements rather than fee title interest in property. The easements were acquired to target wetlands and nesting habitat to help meet the goals of increased pheasant, waterfowl and grassland bird production in the GHRA.

DNR managers were not successful at acquiring easements which included public access. With an obvious need to increase public access for hunting and other activities in the area, the Department worked with the legislature to allow the funding to be used for fee title acquisition: acquisition of easements without access was stopped.

Wild Rivers and Flowages

The closed easements are generally along the Lower Wisconsin Riverway. When the Riverway was established in 1989, one of the goals was to protect the scenic values of the bluffs along the river. Some of the bluffs were actually some distance away from the Riverway corridor itself but still visible from the river. To help protect the scenic values of the Riverway, WI Administrative Code NR 37 was created to guide aesthetic management of both public and private lands along the Riverway. In addition to fee title acquisition the Department was authorized to use easements without access in working with landowners to protect bluff lands for their scenic values.

Sections 2 & 3 – Stewardship lands and conservation easements purchased by local governments and nonprofit organizations with grant assistance

Since its inception in 1990, the Knowles-Nelson Stewardship Program has funded several grant subprograms through which the DNR has awarded money to help grant partners buy land for natural resource conservation and public recreational purposes.

In the last 24 years, the DNR has awarded grants for land and easement acquisition through 10 different grant subprograms to more than 300 different grantees (for more information about Stewardship grant programs, see http://dnr.wi.gov/topic/Stewardship/Grants/). A small percentage of these lands were subsequently transferred to the DNR and incorporated into state properties: the majority of these lands are owned and managed by Stewardship grant partners.

To meet the statutory requirement described above, the DNR has compiled lists of all Stewardship lands purchased in fee (Section 2), and all grant-funded conservation easements (Section 3) acquired before October, 27, 2007 and owned or held by grant program partners.

Both the lists of lands owned in fee and conservation easements indicate whether or not each parcel offers opportunities to hike, hunt, trap, fish and/or cross-country ski. On this list, an "X" in the column for a particular activity indicates that the activity is not allowed on the parcel.

Background and legal context:

Between 1990 and 2007 laws governing Stewardship funding required that land purchased in fee be open to the public for outdoor recreation but did not require public access for specific activities. It is lawful for landowners of grant lands purchased before October, 2007 to disallow particular activities on their properties, including hunting or trapping.

Since 1990, Stewardship laws have also authorized DNR to award grants for conservation easement acquisition. Conservation easements purchased with Stewardship grants were not required to include public access, and in many cases, grantees did not pay for public access rights on those properties.

Due to a 2007 statutory revision, all lands purchased in fee after October 27, 2007 must be open to the public for five specified "nature-based outdoor activities" – hunting, trapping, hiking, cross-country skiing and fishing – unless the Natural Resources Board determines that one or more of those activities should be prohibited to protect public safety or unique ecological communities.

Because no particular recreational opportunities were required by the law before the statute changed, the DNR did not have information about these five nature-based outdoor activities on all Stewardship lands. In order to provide the attached list and maintain similar information about all Stewardship lands, regardless of the grant date, DNR staff created a web-portal to collect information about public uses on Stewardship lands, and communicated with all past-grantees to request this information.

What the list is not

This list is tailored to meet the statutory requirement that DNR make available a list of Stewardship lands on which public access is restricted or prohibited and the reasons why.

- It is not a comprehensive list of all lands purchased with Stewardship grant assistance – some property purchased by grant partners has been transferred to DNR ownership.

- It is not a comprehensive list of all grants – This list only includes grants awarded for land acquisition before October 27, 2007. It does not list grants awarded since then, and does not list the many Stewardship grants to local governments for recreational development projects, not land acquisition.

- This is not designed as a user guide to Stewardship lands. This list indicates activities prohibited or allowed, but does not include additional detail about recreational opportunities. For example, a county park may require a trail pass for skiers or a permit for archery hunting. As is true on any property, visitors interested in particular activities should contact the landowner. Note: for user-oriented information about all Stewardship lands, visit the DNR's web-based Public Access Lands map: http://dnr.wi.gov/topic/lands/PAL/application.html or explore the Public Access Lands Atlas: http://dnr.wi.gov/topic/lands/PAL/

- This list is incomplete. Activity information is missing for some parcels and others list "zero" acres.
  - While DNR continues to request information from all past grantees, there are still some who have not reported complete information about all their properties.
  - Parcels showing zero acres are not actually zero-acre lands: those parcels have not yet been digitally mapped, so acreage is not available as data in the same database housing the rest of the information on this list.

  This list will periodically be updated as additional information is added to the database.

Questions about this report and the information contained in it can be directed to Steve Miller, Director, Bureau of Facilities and Lands.
