I am strongly opposed to diverting Lake Michigan water for the Foxconn project. Such a diversion undermines the Great Lakes Compact, given that diversions it allows under strict exceptions are to address public water supply issues which have no other solution.

Not to mention that the Foxconn project is being allowed unique permissions to fill wetlands, build on lake beds and reroute streams on a massive site- - in a flood-prone region, to boot - - that will, if approved, trigger unprecedented spawn, greater demand for water, road-building, land loss, air pollution, traffic congestion and air pollution.

Surely none are goals of the Great Lakes Compact, a water management and conservation-inspired agreement.

Diverting water to serve a single private business and finding a way to justify it by contorting the goals of the Great Lakes Compact adds a bad precedent and insult to injury. Please reject the application.
