Even though I was unable to attend the hearing regarding the proposal to divert Lake Michigan water for the Foxconn plant, I feel the importance of weighing in on this project.

It's unbelievable how many red flags this project has raised! (Besides being incredibly unpopular with the public sector):

- You can look at our WI state statutes to see that Racine's request deviates from the Great Lakes Compact. (Nothing about it falls under the Great Lakes Compact rules.)
- Too many environmental uncertainties are presented by Foxconn's manufacturing methods.
- State and federal regulations may not keep up with contaminants that aren't fully understood or regulated yet. This is HUGE!
- What is the allowance for consumptive use?
- The water diverted to a straddling community must be used "solely for public water supply purposes". Hello? You do realize that Foxconn is for a private business who's sole purpose is to make money...right??

Once this plant is up and running, and billions of gallons of water are diverted and contaminants that you may know nothing about now are poured in to our great lake, there is no going back.

You have an obligation to protect our water, one of our primary natural resources! Please, do just that! This is just bad for Wisconsin.
