It is my understanding that the Racine Water and Waste facilities have existing excess capacity and can easily process the expected Foxconn requirements. And further that this excess capacity is a result of businesses leaving the Racine area. Thus, at a point in the area history, the waste facility capacities were increased to accommodate manufacturing requirements. As a result, the Foxconn requirements can be thought of as a replacement for the lost manufacturing capacity.

My personal input is that I believe that the city of Waukesha water diversion will induce more impurities via the Root River return path than will Foxconn.

I am in favor of allowing the diversion.
