• Only communities in the Great Lakes Basin or in “straddling” communities can request water
• Communities must employ maximum water conservation measures before requesting additional water – a diversion is a last resort
• Communities must ensure there would be as little loss (consumptive use) of the water as possible
• Water must be returned to the lake it came from • Water must be for public use and not sold for profit or privatized

Hello DNR,

I would like to register my opposition to perverting the 2008 Great Lakes Compact as proposed by Wisconsin’s governor Walker.

Great Lakes water is not supposed to be sold for profit or privatized, which is in effect what the governor’s proposal is intended to do. By using a “straddling” community as a conduit, Walker is trying to give away Great Lakes water for the profit of a private (in this case, a foreign) corporation, Foxconn. Foxconn is ineligible and can not ask for the water. Walker is their proxy enabler.

Please deny this attempt to get around the Great Lakes Compact. There are good reasons that the Compact outlaws this kind of water diversion. Please do not become a party to violating the intent of the Great Lakes Compact.

Thank you,
