Foxconn is a large private industrial company. There are three concerns with the company's Great Lakes Lake Michigan water request.

1. 7 million gallons a day of Great Lakes Lake Michigan water is too much for it!
2. It is too much to ask the local waterworks to have all of the technology to clean the dirty and potentially hazardous chemicals from the water the company uses and flushes down the drain.
3. Finally, this request is a direct betrayal of the core intent of the Great Lakes Compact. That compact, passed a decade ago, keeps Great Lakes water where it belongs – in the Great Lakes.
