As a resident of northern Illinois whose drinking water comes from Lake Michigan, I would like to voice my opposition to the Foxconn request to draw 7 million gallons a day from the lake and return 61% after processing. My concern is that loss of water on a daily basis is too great. In addition, for the water that is returned, there is potential for contamination from the processing at the plant. Lake Michigan is a valuable resource and extreme care should be taken to protect it.
