NOTES

You can learn more about the High Quality Waters assessment process in the draft technical report.

This draft list includes high quality lakes, rivers, and streams in Wisconsin. Wetlands are forthcoming.

For streams and rivers, some segment(s) may not be high quality, but the entire waterbody is currently identified for simplicity.

The high quality waters assessment relies on monitoring data. If you don't see a waterbody on the list, it is likely because:

- 1) It has not been monitored or does not have enough monitoring information across the assessment categories;
- 2) Monitoring data has not been submitted to DNR or the databases DNR can access for assessment purposes.
- 3) It is within tribal/reservation lands and therefore not within the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources' jurisdiction for some assessment categories (e.g. meeting state water quality standards); and/or
- 4) It did not meet 2 of 3 criteria to be determined a high quality water.
